Guru Nanak College (Autonomous), Tamil Departmental Tamil Forum Festival was held on 20-02-2019, 21-02-2019 at the College Premises. He presented prizes to the students who participated in various competitions at the event. The late physicist Stephen Hawking said in an interview that the chances of human society surviving for more than two centuries are slim. In the wake of global warming, over-consumption, and over-exploitation of natural resources, he expressed his deep concern that there is a future for mankind on earth. Theoretical innovations taking place in the fields of science and the proliferation of technological tools are shaking man and the earth into rapid changes. Compiling and documenting the histories of the last century has given me the foremost research on the past. Studies on the future of this century will be in the forefront. Futuristic studies are beginning to intensify in the field of western education. The two-day national seminar was recently organized on behalf of the Tamil Department of the Guru Nanak College in Chennai Velachery with the innovative title ‘Science in the World of Anti-Anthropology’ with the aim of opening these talks in Tamil. Scientific writers, professionals, professors and many others gave lectures. At the same time, he stressed the market cravings of the companies operating behind these medical technologies and the regulations that the government must adopt on them, as well as public health technology policy. The future challenges and technologies of human beings on earth were discussed in detail of the show.
